THE PRESIDENT.

All Reports Still More Favorable.

He Passes Another Comfortable Day and Rests Well.

Everybody Hopeful and the Doctors Confident of His Recovery.

An Armenian Letter of Sympathy and Encouragement.

The Morning Dispatches.

A COMFORTABLE NIGHT.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 19—8. A. M. —Information just received from the sick room is in substance that the president has passed a comparatively comfortable night. He was somewhat restless during the early part of it, owing to pain in the affected glands of the neck, but this pain subsided later in the night, and afterwards the president rested easier. His pulse is reported by the physicians this morning as at about 102. No nausea or vomiting occurred during the night.

OFFICIAL BULLETIN.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 19—8:30 a. m.—The president slept much of the night and this morning is more comfortable than yesterday. The swelling of the right parotid gland has not increased since yesterday evening and is now free from pain. Nutrictive enemata are still given with success, and liquid food has already been swallowed and relished this morning. Pulse, 100; temperature, 98¼; respiration, 17.

DR. HAMMOND JEALOUS.

WASHINGTON, August 19.—Dr. Agnew knew of the swelling of the gland before he left, but did not consider it of sufficient importance to detain him here. The swelling subsided last night and Dr. Agnew examined it.

Speaking of the criticism of Dr. Hammond, of New York, Dr. Bliss said that Hammond applied twice by telegraph to be admitted into the president's case, and was refused both times. Hammond feels bitterly toward Barnes because he succeeded him as surgeon general, and this accounts for Hammond's severe talk.

NOURISHMENT INCREASED.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 19, 10 a. m.—The president continues to do well. He partakes of nourishment more frequently and the quantity is gradually increased. The stomach offers no resistance and the attending surgeons express themselves as very much gratified with the outlook. The inflammation of the right parotid gland is gradually subsiding

DOCTORS POMERINE AND BLISS.

WASHINGTON, August 19.—Dr. Bliss says that Doctor Pomerine, of Ohio, who was surgeon of General Garfield's regiment during the war, came here soon after the president was shot and asked to be admitted to the president's room to see the patient. Bliss replied that it could not possibly do the president any good to let Dr. Pomerine see him, and might do harm, but promised Pomerine to submit his request to the other surgeons. He did so, and they flatly refused to assent to permitting any visit from Pomerine. Bliss reported the decision to Pomerine a day or two later, and, says Dr. Bliss, Dr. Pomerine went to the White house went through the reception room up stairs and slipped into the president's room while his surgeons were all absent. While Pomerine was beside the president talking to him Dr. Reyburn entered the room and very peremptorily invited Pomerine to leave. Bliss says Pomerine sneaked into the president's room after having been refused admission and because he was turned out he has since assailed the president's surgeons.

BRIGHTER PROSPECTS.

The president is better this morning. His physicians say he has continued to improve, and regard the swelling of the parotid gland as about conquered. Surgeons and all others at the White House feel very hopeful to-day. The quantity of nourishment administered is being steadily increased and the stomach retains and digests it. The president's bowels are now acting regularly and naturally.

AN AMUSING INCIDENT.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, August 19.—Early this afternoon a young woman appeared at the entrance to the Executive Mansion grounds attired in a bathing suit and applied for admission, saying she must see the president immediately or he would be dead in an hour. She had in her possession a miniature saw and vial containing liquid. A curious crowd gathered around the female, and one of the guards informed her she would have to go with him.

"What for?" she inquired.

"Why," said the guard, "Don't you see what a sensation you are causing."

"That is not my fault," she quickly replied, "You are a policeman, disperse the crowd."

After demanding again to see the president and stating she was just from Manhattan beach and that her husband was a fireman in Brooklyn, she suffered the policeman to take her in charge.

The cranky woman at the White House was handsome and young. She gave the name of Mary Louise Remiger, and said she came from Paris especially to cure the president. She was sent to the government insane asylum. Under her bathing suit she wore the costume of a ballet dancer and variety actress. She was not violent.

THE INTER OCEAN'S DESPATCH.

CHICAGO, August 19.—The Inter Ocean's Washington special says: The symptoms continue encouraging. Pulse 100, temperature 98.8, respiration 17.

DR. BLISS STILL HOPEFUL.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 19, 12.10 p. m.—Dr. Bliss, who has just come from the president's room, in reply to the question, "How is the patient?" said: "Oh, he is getting on splendidly. He experiences no pain from the inflammation of the gland, the swelling of which has almost entirely subsided. Yes, it has almost entirely subsided."

"You do not apprehend any further annoyance from the parotid gland, then?"

"No, sir."

"How is the pulse this morning, doctor?"

"From 100 to 104 beats and comparatively firm; temperature and respiration are about normal. The patient has taken to-day from fourteen to sixteen ounces of koumiss and milk gruel."

"Does he still relish the gruel?"

"Yes; he appears very fond of it."

"Do you expect to administer anything besides this?"

"We may give him something more later in the day."

"Will it be milk?"

"Oh, no; we can't let him have raw milk yet."

"What do you think of the respiration being below the normal?"

"Oh! that does not signify anything but extreme weakness."

TO MINISTER LOWELL.

WASHINGTON, August 19.

To Lowell, Minister at London:

At 1:30 o'clock the condition of the president is better than at any time during the past four days. There is an increase of hopeful feeling in regard to his recovery.

EXAMINING THE WHITE HOUSE.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 19.—At the invitation of Colonel Rockwell the commissioner of public buildings and grounds, Col. Geo. E. Waring and his assistants from Newport, Rhode Island, who are acknowledged experts in sanitary matters, are now in the city for the purpose of making a thorough examination of the sewerage and drainage of the executive mansion with a view to ascertaining what improvements are necessary to put the house in perfect sanitary condition.

The Afternoon Dispatches.

NOON OFFICIAL BULLETIN.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 19, 12.30 p. m. The president's condition has perceptibly improved during the last twenty-four hours. The parotid swelling is evidently diminishing and has not pained since last night. He has taken to-day an increased quantity of liquid food by the mouth which is relished and produces no gastric irritation. Pulse now 100, temperature 98.8, respiration 17.

HIS DAILY NOURISHMENT.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 19, 2.30 p. m. Dr. Hamilton left on the 2.10 train for New York; Dr. Agnew is expected to arrive to-night; Dr. Bliss says the patient continues to improve. During the day he has had twenty ounces of beef extract administered by means of enemeta in addition sixteen ounces of koumiss and milk gruel taken naturally.

IMPROVED SINCE NOON.

WASHINGTON, August 19. The midday bulletin shows a very favorable condition for the president, and has inspired renewed hope. Dr. Boynton, who came from the president's room at 1 o'clock, said he was better than he was early in the morning and steadily improving. The swelling of the gland has receded, and now causes no pain, and the doctors consider that the trouble now is virtually over. The president has taken more nourishment to-day and his stomach grows stronger. It is believed that in several days he can take solid food. At the White house the most hopeful feeling prevails.

The Evening Dispatches.

THE EVENING BULLETIN.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 19 6:30 P. M.—The president has been easy during the afternoon, and the favorable conditions reported in the last bulletin continue. The swollen gland has not been painful. The temperature is the same and the pulse rather less frequent than at this hour yesterday. Pulse 100, temperature 100, respiration 19.

WORDS OF SYMPATHY FROM ARMENIA.

WASHINGTON, August 19.—The following communication was received from the Patriarch of the Armenians in Turkey:

Mr. President,

Providence, which watches over the days of virtuous men in the service of free countries, has saved the illustrious president of the United States from the cowardly attempt against his life. As a servant of the mission church who prays daily for all chiefs of christendom, I hasten to express to you my most felicitous congratulations. As a representative of the Armenians of Turkey, I am happy to avail myself of this occasion Mr. President, to be the chosen conveyance to you of the sentiment of high admiration which my nation feels for the government and people of the United States, a government which realizes all dreams of the friends of liberty and people whose philanthropy obeys the highest precepts of religion and morality. Invoking the benediction of heaven upon you and upon the people whose destinies you so nobly rule, and praying Almighty Powerful to hold your precious life in His keeping, I have the honor to be, Mr. President, your humble servant, in the Lord Jesus Christ. ARCHBISHOP NERCES,
Armenian Patriarch.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 19, 11 p. m. —The president's condition to-day has been decidedly better than any day since the unfavorable symptoms of Monday manifested themselves. He has slept more to-day than usual and appears much refreshed on awakening from slumber. While the gland inflammation has not entirely disappeared it is thought there is less irritation from the fact that the patient does not experience so much. Another feature denoting improvement is the tone of the stomach which has not yet shown any gastric disturbance. Members of the cabinet and all others who called during the day have left the Mansion obviously much encouraged. The air of solemnity which has prevailed at the White House the past few days has given place to a decidedly better feeling. It is now quite generally conceded that inflammation of the parotid gland does not indicate pyemia and is due entirely to the patient's debility. Not a word of a despondent character has been uttered to-day by those having access to the president's room, and faith in his recovery as expressed by those persons has been of almost a sanguine nature. Said one of the attending surgeons this evening, "The president has made sensible improvement to-day."

DENVER.

More Damage by Cloud Bursts. Death of Rev. R. L. Herbert. The Capital Question Discussed.

A PASTOR'S DEATH.

DENVER, August 19.—Rev. R. L. Herbert, pastor of the Unitarian church, of this city, died this evening, the cause being the enlargement of the liver. He has been in poor health for years, but was confined to his bed for four or five days.

DETAINED BY WASHOUTS.

No trains have arrived or departed on the Kansas Pacific since yesterday, owing to a washout from three to four miles in length, near Deer Trail. Trains probably will not be able to run through until Sunday or Monday. The washout was caused by a cloud burst.

CHERRY CREEK.

Cherry Creek is booming to-night. About three feet of water is in the channel. No damage is reported.

FOR THE CAPITAL.

Pursuant to a call a large number of Denver's business men assembled at the district court rooms this evening to consider the capital question, and fix a plan which will ensure good honest work for Denver. The meeting was very brief and quiet. Resolutions expressing the greatest confidence in the members of the executive committee were unanimously adopted, and the old committee was reappointed by acclamation.

THE WASHOUTS.

Trains Delayed and Bridges Swept Away.

DENVER, August 19.—The track of the Kansas Pacific near Dear Trail is badly washed out, and as the bridge near the same place was washed away, last night's train on the Kansas Pacific has not yet left and probably will not leave until to-morrow morning. A land slide a mile and a half east of Estabrook on the South Park road has been cleared away and the South Park passenger train which left Leadville yesterday morning arrived here at noon to-day. There is a bridge washed away and the track is washed out in several places on the San Juan division of the Denver & Rio Grande road. Passengers are being transferred at the breaks.

TRADE REPORTS.

The Boston Wool Market—The Condition of Trade in New York.

BOSTON, August 19.—The wool market is firm and prices are well sustained with an increased demand for fine and medium washed fleeces. Sales of Ohio and Pennsylvania have been 45,000 lbs. X and XX at 40 to 42c; XX and above, 43c. Very little desirable XX is to be had under 42c. In Michigan X fleeces the sales have been upwards of 20,000 lbs. at 39 to 40c, and firm at these prices. Medium and No. 1 Ohio and Pennsylvania have been selling at 45 to 47c, and have been in fair demand. Combing and delaines selections are sought after and quite firm. The stock of fine delaine is very reduced, all available lots having been bought up at 44 to 46c for Michigan and Ohio. Fine Ohio is selling readily at the latter rate. Unwashed combing has been selling at 30 to 31c. Territory wools are in fair request. Prices remain unchanged, low and coarse selling at 15 to 22c. Carpet at 19½ to 18c; Georgia, 33½c; fine unwashed, 25 to 30c, and medium 27 to 42c. In California wools very little is doing and stocks are held above the views of buyers. Pulled wool is steady. Small stocks and superfine and extra have been selling at 35 to 47c, as to quality. Foreign wools are quiet, but stocks are light and held firm. Sales of all kinds have been 1,860,000.

NEW YORK, August 19.—Condition of trade the past week. Business generally keeps fairly active for this season, the continuance of the railroad war and the consequent cheap rates bringing business in many lines of trade to the city earlier than usual. Merchants generally are satisfied with the prospects of fall trade and some large interests are said to look better at this period than before. Jobbers in dry goods claim quite a good business. Times are lively with them and they are anticipating an active trade. Commission and clothing houses report a fair business and seem well satisfied. Many buyers are in town, mostly from the west and south, and are ordering liberally of merchandise. Their business is legitimate and not speculative. Freights are dull and unsettled.

HUNG FOR CRIME.

A New York Murderer Pays the Penalty of His Crime.

BATAVIA, N. Y., August 19.—The execution of Charles Stockley for the murder of John Walker on the 27th of April took place at three o'clock to-day. Walker was ploughing in the field when Stockley deliberately walked up and fired three shots at him, one with fatal effect. Stockley had been employed by Walker as a farm hand, and had sought through Walker a marriage with his sixteen-year-old daughter, Lizzie, but was refused both by the girl and her parents, and the only motive for the crime was revenge. Since his conviction the prisoner has feigned insanity and has at times acted like a maniac

THE INDIAN CONFERENCE.

The Poncas Are Given a Home by the Sioux—Red Cloud Asks for Sitting Bull.

WASHINGTON, August 19.—The Sioux and Ponca chiefs met the secretary of the interior and the Indian commissioner again to-day about the transfer of land to the Poncas. Red Cloud for the Sioux said he would give each Ponca family six hundred and forty acres, and each Ponca without a family sixty acres, and that the Sioux regarded the land as properly belonging to the Poncas anyhow, because it was their former reservation and they left it unwillingly. Papers formally making the transfer were drawn up and signed. Red Cloud asked about Sitting Bull, and Secretary Kirkwood replied that Sitting Bull was in charge of the war department yet, and the interior had no authority for him. Red Cloud said the Ogallalahs and the Brules, who surrendered with Sitting Bull, formerly belonged to the Red Cloud reservation. He would like to have them back. The secretary said he would assign the Ogallalahs to Red Cloud and the Brules to White Thunder as soon as provisions and supplies for them can be sent to these agencies.

THE MINING MARKETS.

Stocks Generally Active and Higher. The Dividends for the Week.

NEW YORK, August 19. The Mining Associated Press reports as follows, concerning the mining stocks market: The past seven days mining stock were active and many show an advance over last week's closing prices. Among the exceptions are State Line and Oriental and Miller, which were comparatively quiet and steady until to-day when numbers two and three broke to 4.95; numbers one and four to 1.05, and Oriental and Miller to 1.10. Miner Boys has been the most active stock on the list, the prices recovering from 47 to 64 on reports of a strike in the mine. Robinson Consolidated advanced to 125¢ on reports of a strike in the new ground, and reports are generally favorable. Mining affairs are attracting more attention and operators anticipate an active and advancing market.

During the week the following dividends were declared and paid: Greek Mountain, 7½c. per share; Homestake, 30c.; Tombstone, 10c.; Copper Queen, 10c.; Eureka Consolidated, 50c.; La Plata, 7½c.; Evening Star, 5 per cent. Total sales in mining stocks at both exchanges were over 880,000 shares.

BLACK VS. WHITE.

Serious Disturbances in an Arkansas Town Between the Whites and Negroes.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., August 19.—Morrilltown, a small village fifty miles from this city, is in great excitement over the anticipated collision between the colored and white citizens. The trouble originated about a negro abusing white children. A day or two after the father of the children met the negro and gave him a terrible beating. A negro preacher took the part of the assaulted negro. Feeling ran so high that friends of both parties ranging themselves on either side several street fights occurred more or less serious but the determined stand of the officers prevented a fatal termination. The colored people threaten to burn the town. The citizens of Morrilltown are here to-day for the purpose of asking the governor to raise a military company at Morrilltown, to preserve peace.

CHICAGO 'CHANGE.

Prices Rampant in the Chicago Grain Exchange.

CHICAGO, August 19.—Old timers on 'change say that a heavier business was transacted to-day than ever before in the session. The excitement at the opening was intense and continued throughout the morning and up to one o'clock when the gong dispersed the crowd. The tendency was steadily up until the last hour when with many fluctuations prices began to break. There was at the close a very weak feeling and lower figures. Sales of September wheat were made at 123⅛ to 126¾ and of October 124 to 127¾.

The New Hampshire legislature yesterday killed the Marston excise bill and the bill to provide for purity in elections.

CRESTED BUTTE.

Its Situation—History—Resources and Prospects.

From the Democrat.

In all the Gunnison country there is no town that can rival Crested Butte in the attractiveness of its surroundings. It is a charming little town whose many attractions will be more widely known ere long, and as modes of travel become better many visitors will be drawn here for the summer months. As a summer resort it has more attractions and advantages than any other town in the whole Gunnison country, and this is asserting a good deal for a county in which there are so many pretty little towns and such a variety of mountain scenery. But it is not as a summer resort alone that Crested Butte bases its hopes of future greatness.

LOCATION.

The town is in the midst of many and valuable resources. It is situated at the junction of Coal creek and Slate river, in the northwestern part of Gunnison county. The various roads and trails to all the surrounding towns radiate from this point. It is half way between Ruby Camp, or Irwin, and Gothic, being seven miles from both places. It is entirely outside of the reservation line, in consequence of which there is not and cannot be any conflict in securing titles to land. The Slate river runs along one boundary of the town, while on two sides high grass and timber-grown bluffs rise up as a protection from the winds. Across the valley is Crested Butte mountain, one of the most picturesque of all the grand Elk mountain range. To the south lies a wide, beautiful valley filled with busy, thriving ranchmen, whose mowers may now be seen in their immense hay fields. Slate river comes down from the north, a clear, pure stream. In the immediate vicinity are Lake Harriet, Emerald lake, Smith lake and Lake Hurst, all pretty bodies of water surrounded by mountain walls. The town site is "high and dry," although level, the grade being only eight inches in 100 feet. The altitude is about 8,000 feet. The surroundings are cheerful and pleasant. There is a total lack of the dreariness that characterizes so many mountain towns. The vegetation is most luxuriant. That the town has not ere this arisen to greater prominence can be attributed to many excellent reasons, among which may be mentioned the past undeveloped state of mining property and the lack of rail and wagon roads, obstacles that are fast being overcome and will not longer retard the advancement of the town. It is one of the pioneer towns of the county, and its

EARLY HISTORY

is not uninteresting. The founder of the town was Mr. Howard F. Smith, and to him is due much of the prosperity of Crested Butte. He brought a saw mill to the locality in the spring of 1877, and this was the first mill brought into the Elk mountains. On its completion Mr. Smith commenced the erection of a smelter, the value and extent of the mineral resources having become known. In 1878 the smelter was completed, and a large boarding house and store building had been erected. That Mr. S. had great confidence in the future of the locality, may be known from the fact that he spent over $50,000 here before there was any one in the town beside himself and his employés. In 1880 the population began to increase, as the possibilities of the town and the certainty of its future became known. Never before was the future as promising as now. In a very short time the railroad will be in Crested Butte, and nothing could contribute more to its advancement.

MINERAL RESOURCES.

The partly developed localities directly tributary to Crested Butte are Washington, O-Be Joyful and Poverty gulches, although it is the center of a very large mineral belt in which there are immense veins, some of them as wide as ten feet, of heavy galena, giving surface assays of over 100 ounces and in every instance development has increased the value of the ore and the size of the veins. Native and ruby silver are found in small veins and mill runs of over 600 ounces have been had from several lots of ore. Iron ore is found in great quantities on Coal creek, three miles from the town. This ore can be utilized readily for fluxing purposes. On Slate river, eight miles from the town, there is a large deposit of hematite, and in other points magnetic iron is found, and red hematite is found in O-Be Joyful gulch at a point about four miles from Crested Butte. Fine white and blue limestone is found in great quantities. Of the vast coal beds special mention is made in another column. No other district in the country can boast of such varied and valuable resources. Much of the ore is of very high grade, although there are immense bodies of galena ore in the vicinity that are only about average grade. In some localities carbonates have been found. The location is particularly adapted for the erection of and in time Crested Butte will be the main smelting point for the Gunnison country ores. It will, after the present year, have the superior advantage of a railroad added to its fuel, water and fine wagon roads. There is one smelter here now, and there will be need of others with the rapid development of the country.

COAL.

If there were nothing else here but the immense coal fields, Crested Butte would, in time, become a prominent point. The coal is within very easy access; in fact, the coal trains can run right to the tunnel mouths, and there will be none of the expense and trouble of hauling it in wagons to the cars. Grading has already been commenced for the track of the C. C. & I. company. The coal is of superior quality and endless in quantity. A number of veins have been discovered. Three veins, very similar to those found near Canon City, have been found, and below these are found veins of coking coal that cannot be surpassed in the United States. These veins outcrop from the mountain side, and are free from slate, thereby making unnecessary the work of sorting the coal. Large coke ovens are to be erected. An analysis of the coal gives 68.70 fixed carbon; 7 ash; 22.80 gas; 1.50 moisture. The per cent of coke is 75.70. This superior to the Connellsville, Pennsylvania, coal. The Crested Butte coal can be coked for $1.25 per ton.

ANTHRACITE COAL.

At the head of Coal creek are great beds of anthracite coal, which is the only real anthracite west of the Alleghanies. Tests of this coal have proven it to be of very superior quality. Recently a fine vein of anthracite has been found on Slate river, at a point about three and one-half miles from town. The veins are from two to five feet in width, and carry 92 per cent. of fixed carbon. From the above fact it can readily be seen that this is a most important point in Colorado, and cannot but have a bright future before it. Hundreds of acres of coal land have been taken up by companies and will now be developed. Messrs. Smith, Holt and Axtell and others, of Crested Butte, own many acres. The Denver and Rio Grande railroad company have over 1,200 acres. The Coal and Silver Mining company of Philadelphia have 700 acres, and the have 1,500 acres of coking coal and have just commenced extensive development. They will ere long have 15 men at work here and will keep them employed during the winter getting out and coking coal. They have five veins and are now working two of them. These veins are five and six feet in width. The value of these coal fields must be apparent by all who visit them. They are hardly second in importance to our fine silver mines, and their discovery and development means new wealth for Colorado.

COLORADO COAL AND IRON COMPANY

IRON.

Within three miles of Crested Butte is a very large iron swamp, yielding bog iron containing 60 to 65 per cent. metallic iron. In time iron blast furnaces may be erected here, and without them the iron is of great value for fluxing purposes.

LIMESTONE.

A very fine quality of limestone is found three miles from Crested Butte, adding another not unimportant feature to the town's resources. Good building stone is also found near the city.

Building material is cheap, there being so much fine timber and many saw mills near the town.

FIRE CLAY.

At a distance of about 12 miles from Crested Butte, near what is known as "Jack's Cabin," a large bed of fire clay has been found. Tests have been had establishing its value beyond question. Preparations are being made for utilizing this clay.

SULPHUR AND HOT SPRINGS.

One and one half miles north of Crested Butte, on Slate river, are the White Sulphur springs, whose waters are known to possess medicinal qualities. On Cement creek, four miles from the town, are hot and cold soda springs of fine quality.

CRESTED BUTTE TOWN COMPANY.

The town site company is composed of Messrs. Howard F. Smith, Wm. T. Holt, Geo. H. Holt and others. Every encouragement is offered for the investment of capital, and any one visiting the town and examining its resources will become convinced that there are no risks in certain investments here. Town lots are not held at exorbitant prices and to persons intending to locate permanently in the town lots are sold at reduced rates. The town company have manifested great enterprise in encouraging everything that could contribute in any degree to the general good of their town. They have had to wait long and patiently for results, but the future will repay them for this.

THE DENVER AND RIO GRANDE.

By the first of October and probably sooner the Denver and Rio Grande railroad company will be running trains into Crested Butte, a fact of more than ordinary significance. It is the intention of the railroad company to make this a prominent point, and they will use their influence to that end. The company own one-fourth of the town site and many acres of coal land. They will erect good buildings, having many of their shops here. The influence they can and will exert, will make Crested Butte one of the most important places in the Gunnison country.

NEW OPERA HOUSE.

Pueblo Not to be Outdone by Other Colorado Cities.

Mr. Thomas Kemp of Pueblo is now having plans prepared for a new opera house in that city. This announcement, should it be carried into effect, will be a source of great benefit to the people of Colorado Springs as it will add another suitable place of amusement to the Colorado circuit and thus insure us the best class of theatrical combinations on the road. Below we print what the Chieftain has to say in reference to the enterprise: "Mr. Thomas Kemp, who has been absent in Leadville for the past two weeks, was expected in the city last night. We are pleased to announce that Mr. Kemp has completed all necessary arrangements looking to the erection of his opera house in this city. The plans are now being drawn by Messrs. H. W. Barbour and A. E. Jones, of the firm of Jones & Co., architects, Leadville, who have now located in our city permanently. Mr. Barbour has been in the city since Thursday last, awaiting orders from Mr. Kemp, and yesterday Mr. Jones arrived from Leadville with orders to commence the drawings at once, as all necessary arrangements had been made for the construction of the building. The architects will commence work at once, and as Mr. Kemp has given instructions to spare no expense on the construction of the Opera House, or its appointments, we feel justified in saying that Pueblo will soon have as fine a temple of amusement as there is in any city in the state, with the exception of the Tabor opera house, Denver, and in many respects it will not be inferior to that structure. The opera house proper will be 65x130 feet, while the entire block will be 90x120 feet. The building will cost in the neighborhood of $75,000, and will be an ornament to the city. Mr. George Heiman, the well known scenic artist, of the Union Square theatre, New York, who has been in Colorado for the past two months on a furlough, will design the ornamentation of the interior, and the same will be ordered by Mr. Heiman, who goes east in a few days. When this structure is completed Pueblo will be able to offer to its people and the public as fine a dramatic or operatic entertainment as any city in the state."

Mutual Good Feeling.

CITY OF MEXICO, August 19. An official journal publishes communications exchanged between the governors of Sonora and Arizona in regard to the recent invasion of the cow boys in Sonora. The communications show that the greatest harmony exists on the subject between the governors, who with the United States marshal have attempted to prevent invasion into either country.

Peabodyism seems to be in the capital fight to stay.

If Guiteau could only get a change of venue to Colorado.

The people of Colorado are fairly itching to give Guiteau a taste of Colorado justice.

The state of the stock market shows nothing is to be feared in case of President Garfield's death. The serious condition he is in has caused no serious break in the stocks.

The capital question is in a more mixed condition than ever. It grows more and more evident that Denver cannot receive a majority of the votes this fall. Either there will be no election or else some city south of the Divide will be selected this fall.

There has been we understand but one shipment of wool from this county to eastern commission merchants this season. Nearly all the wool has been sold here. This is unusual. The sales have usually taken place quite largely through commission merchants and at a much later date.

The initial principle of democracy is that the majority should rule. And yet according to all accounts the Russian nihilists constitute a immensely very small proportion of the Russian people. Their number is so small that no percentage can be obtained for there are not enough of them to make one in a hundred of the population.

The full voting strength of the house of lords is four hundred and ninety-one. But there is rarely that number present. The largest vote obtained by the government on the land bill was sixty-one. Forty nine of the peers in the present house were created by Mr Gladstone and thirty-eight by Beaconsfield and during the reign of Victoria there have been one hundred and seventy two peers created.

The dispatch of sympathy from the Armenians to President Garfield is worthy of more than passing notice. This people though successively conquered and ruled by Roman, Persian, Greek, Saracen and Turk, have maintained their national characteristics and have handed down through twenty centuries of oppression the purest traditions of liberty and lofty patriotism. While the Germanic races along the northern boundaries of Europe were from their earliest written history free and liberty loving the Armenians were still more intelligent and devoted friends of liberty. They have preserved older and nobler traditions than Swiss or Montenegrin. Notwithstanding they have been a conquered race, they have been the really strong race in southwestern Europe and in western Asia, and have furnished the ablest commanders and statesmen. The persecution of Moslem and infidel has never shaken their Christian faith, and it has been handed down undimmed by age and untarnished by bitter opposition. That such a people way off upon the barren hills of Asia should have so kindly remembered us shows that the people are worthy descendants of their fathers. In the revolution that is now quietly passing over Europe the Armenians are soon destined to take an active part and will assert themselves. They will make a strong vigorous nation of patriotic Christians and allied to the highest types of democracy.

CHARITY RED TAPE

Charitable institutions are good things. They help the sick and the needy very often. Citizens of large cities, and of country towns are very glad to pay a certain tax toward supporting the institutions which will relieve them of all care for the sick, the infirm and the aged. It is very comforting to think, even if it is not quite believed, that the rich may refuse to worry themselves about the unfortunate after having paid their taxes and seen the reports of those whose business it is to look over the various establishments of public charities.

And yet now and then there is something told about the red tape business connected with hospitals and asylums which causes many to wonder if such things can be and to ask if there is not too much formality required before the needy can be attended to. In eastern cities especially there are times when the officers of the public charities are severely criticised and taken to task, and when the people feel that the whole system of public charities should be overhauled. Not is fault found alone with the institutions of the east. A writer in the Atlantic has lately contributed a series of papers on the local charities houses of the country, which are described as being very badly managed and which are in need of reform in every state of the country.

One of the latest instances of the curse of red tape is found in the story of a man who lived in Philadelphia. He had been hard-working, sober and a resident of the city for many years. But one day misfortunes began to come upon him. He lost his wife, then his child, and at last his health too. He went away, still a sober honest man hoping that a change would bring him benefits. But the days were destined never to be brighter for him. His health grew worse he became weak and the worse he grew the stronger became the desire to see his old home. He returned to Philadelphia and sought his friends. As for him, they all left him. He was alone in a great city, dying of consumption. He had now no money. He went from place to place and only one man is poor as he could offer him a place to rest.

At this state of affairs he applied for permission to enter some hospital where he might at least die. He was refused. Again and again he knocked at different doors, and yet none were opened. The excuses were as varied as the refusal. The fact that he had been a citizen of the city, that he had never asked charity before, and that he had paid his taxes counted as nothing. Not a bed was at his disposal. He tried the red tape, and obtained letters and documents to prove he was what he professed to be and at the same answers were always given that he could not enter that he was not qualified.

Red tape killed the man. He became discouraged. His only friend could give him shelter no longer, and on a dark and dismal night with not a friend to watch at his side with his head upon a shutter and his emaciated body on the side wall he breathed his last within the very shadows of the boasted charitable institutions of the city he had lived in for so long.

There can be no excuse for such neglect as this. Common humanity at least should have given him shelter. Red tape might have been forgotten for the sake of this man whom the authorities could not have helped knowing was what he professed to be. It is a blot upon the city which protects such men in their positions as overseers of public hospitals and for the sake of other similar cases and for humanity as well the people should raise a cry loud and long against the red tape barbarism which allows a fellow man to go hungry where there is plenty and to die in misery when there is comfort near at hand.

Why More Women

Troy Times.

It is only in our own beloved America that women of all classes receive that respect and consideration to which they are so unquestionably entitled by nature. While some of the other sex are ever hard to the real worth of woman there are yet a few who can appreciate her as for instance when Quincy was asked why there were more women than men he replied "It is in conformity with the arrangements of nature. We always see more of heaven than earth."

The Boston Herald says: The republicans and democrats in New York are both in a hurry and watching for a row in the opposite camp to give them the victory in the fall election. Both parties are in for a wrangle in the metropolis, and the peace-makers get little encouragement thus far. The lack of unanimity for the democratic nominees is painfully apparent. They appear to be paying for the sins of the disgraceful contest at Albany but the people are not quite have that settled. Conkling put down and kicked shaken off the more further interest in that dead issue. The republican state administration has been on the whole very good. Gov. Cornell's vetoes have strengthened him and saved the party from the reproach of much bad and foolish legislation. But for the control of the republican machine in New York city by the Conkling Arthur faction and the possibility of a trial with John Kelly the [illegible]

SIR FRANCIS DRAKE

The Hero Whose Memory England Will Honor

In seven years will occur the tercentenary of the defeat of the Spanish Armada, an event which England will recall by erecting a monument to the memory of Sir Francis Drake, subscriptions for which are now being received. Drake, says the London Times, was one of the men who are necessary to the foundation of a country's greatness, and who would probably find their energy leading them into unheroic positions in years when a nation has become settled and respectable. Let us hope that we may never become so respectable as to be ashamed of Sir Francis Drake. He was emphatically a man of his time, a time unlike ours. International law was not in a satisfactory condition, and the theory of "natural enemies" was frankly avowed and acted upon. Drake's origin was so obscure that no one seems to have thought it worth while to leave on record the precise date of his birth. He entered life, like so many famous admirals, as a cabin boy. In the old seafaring ballads like "The Golden Vanity" —if indeed, that pleasing strain be ancient—we find the cabin boy a hero who performs precocious exploits. Drake, like other lads in his humble station, was lucky enough to win the regard of his skipper, who died and bequeathed his vessel to the young apprentice. Drake prospered in commerce, and, in 1567 sailed with Capt. Hawkins to Mexico. The venture was a failure, and everything that Drake had fell into the hands of the Spaniards. He returned to Europe, and was so sanguine as to expect the Spanish court to repay him for what Spanish subjects had plundered. Failing in this hopeful enterprise, he made a vow, as well kept as that of Hannibal, to recoup himself at the expense of a nation at once cruel and Papist. In 1570 Queen Elizabeth gave him some sort of commission which he appears to have interpreted as a sanction of what seven thinkers would now call piracy. In 1573 he sailed with the Pasha, the Swan and another small vessel and plundered the Spanish town of Nombre de Dios. He crossed the Isthmus of Panama, burned much Spanish shipping, got his first view of the Pacific, and determined to sail an English ship in those seas. Drake was now a rich man. He equipped three frigates at his own expense, and served as a volunteer in the Irish troubles. He could not have made much booty out of the Irish kerns, so he returned to England, was well received by Elizabeth, and raised a force to sail through the recently discovered Straits of Magellan and explore the Pacific. With but five little vessels and 166 men, he set forth into unknown seas, infested by innumerable enemies. By the time he reached the straits of Magellan, he had none but his own ship to depend upon. Winter, his second in command, had returned to England. The solitary English vessel, with her indomitable commander, sailed up the Chilian and Peruvian coast laden, plundering and destroying. Drake was alone with his handful of men in a whole world of foes. When he reached the Cape of Good Hope on his homeward way he had but 57 men in his crew and three casks of water in his hold. When his ship, the Golden Hind, entered Plymouth harbor, the first English vessel that ever sailed around the world had been absent two years and ten months. This voyage of Drake is scarcely to be rivalled as an example of what audacity can do. By this time relations between England and Spain were extremely "strained" and Drake was employed in the roughly drawn which his individual exertions and energetic private enterprise had done so much for. In 1586 he took certain cities in the West Indies. Two years later, when the great armada was being collected in Cádiz harbor, Drake sailed in and burned 10,000 tons of shipping. When the invasion was attempted Drake was appointed vice-admiral. The famous legend says that he was playing bowls when the news of the approach of the fleet was brought to him and that he hastened our finishing his game by the struggle with the armada, his individual courage and generalship aided by the elements—scattered the vast fleet and—left Christendom—hope fearfully to ask "Who are the galleons of Spain?" Drake's last years were somewhat clouded by failure and disappointment. He was one of the first great English admirals of the Hawkins Benbows, Dunconns, Cullingswood Nelsons who in history is the most inspiriting that an Englishman can read. These were men who revelled in accomplishing the impossible whose delight was the delight of battle. The warriors of the sea have a kind of stormy grandeur in their single-handed exploits, as when Grenville fought the Spanish ships with the Revenge or when Dunconn blockaded with one vessel the whole Dutch fleet which is not given to soldiers on dry land. They fought by preference in defiance of numbers and of rules, they won by pure confidence and hard hitting. It will be an evil day for England when she despises or forgets them. The monument of Drake is a monument to the old fighting spirit which is certainly not extinct in the English people and which on fitting occasion would burst forth in all its fire and strength. Nothing could be more silly than the theoretic mock heroics of our Jingoes and Elizabeth revivalists.

Samuel Pepys

The Cornhill Magazine

Pepys was a young man for his age, came slowly to himself in the world, sowed his wild oats late, took late to industry and preserved till nearly 30 the headlong gait of a boy. So to some rightly at the spirit in which the diary was written we must recall a class of sensations which with most of us are over and done long before the age of 17. In our tender years we still preserve a freshness of surprise at our prolonged existence, events in the impression out of all proportion to their consequences, we are unspeakably touched by our own past adventures, and look forward to our future personality with continental interest. It was something of this I think that clung to Pepys. Although not sentimental in the abstract he was sweetly sentimental about himself. His own past clung about his heart in every fold. He was the slave of an association. He could not pass by Islington where his father used to carry him to cakes and ale, but he must light at the King's Head and eat and drink for remembrance of the old house's sake. He counted it a good fortune that he caught at Epsom to renew his old walks where Mrs. Holy and I did use to walk and talk with whom I had the first sentiments of love and pleasure in a woman's company discourse and taking her by the hand she being a pretty woman. He goes about walking up the Assurance which lay near Woolwich under water, and cries in a parenthesis, "Poor ship that I have been three merry in, in Captain Holland's time, and after revisiting the Nasby now changed into the Charles, he confesses "it was a great pleasure to my eye to see the ship that I began my good fortune in." The stone that he was cut for he preserved in a case, and to the farmers he kept alive such gratitude for their assistance that for years and after he had begun to mount himself into higher zones he continued to have that family to dinner on the anniversary of the operation. Not Horace nor Rousseau had a more romantic passion for their past, although at times they might express it more fantastically and if Pepys shared with them his childish foibles, did not Rousseau with all behind him his "Confessions," or Horace, who wrote the "Odes" and fourth book has essays with loving personal detail share with Pepys in his unwearied egotism? For the two things go hand in hand or, to be more exact, it is the first that makes the second either possible or pleasing.

Japanese Children

The Japanese children have to endure hardships from their birth. In their tiny easy chairs no well-spread tables around which the family gather and hold sweet converse. You must stoop to enter the ordinary houses, and their rooms are not much larger than closets. A part of the floor is covered with mats on which they sit and sleep. A block of wood four inches high hollowed a little at the top, answers as a pillow. Sometimes it has stuffing on the top an inch thick, over which a clean piece of paper is spread each time it is used to save any needful washing. The head poised on this pillow, prevents the disarrangement of the hair, so that it need not be combed more than once or twice in a week. But the poor babies and little children's heads are shaved entirely, or have from one to five tufts of hair left on the top over each ear and on the back. I have seen little babies with heads entirely shaven, and uncovered on the coldest day while the mother or person on whose back it was carried had the face and head covered only the eyes and nose visible. Dr Hepburn says: Only very strong babies survive their infancy.

Japanese houses have only paper windows; they have no stoves or grates, but a little box, from one to two feet square, with some coals in the center, is all they have for warmth or cooking. Two or three cups, as many plates, a teapot, a kettle and some boxes to hold their clothing complete their furniture. All the houses I have seen are very clean, which is their only appearance of comfort.

Little children are often made to take care of the baby. A very common sight is a little boy or girl, from five to twelve years old, playing with a kite, with a baby strapped on their backs, fast asleep, but sometimes crying. In the latter case they only say, Be quiet and go on with their play. But Japanese children seldom cry or quarrel and are very obedient to parents and teachers whom they venerate.

The Break in the Traditions of the English Stage

Richard Grant White in Atlantic Monthly

In 1642 the Elizabethan school of action came to an end with the compulsory closing of the theatres and although only 18 years elapsed before they were reopened in that time not only had all the old school of actors passed away, but with them had disappeared the taste which they had formed. At the return of Charles II. the theatres were opened but the old English drama was not revived—Shakespeare's plays, Beaumont and Fletcher's, Jonson's, were not performed. A new drama appeared in England, that known as the drama of the restoration—a base thing, witty but filthy, and as devoid of real humor as of serious strength, and with it came a new school of acting. Consequently, when after many years of taunt and sneer, Shakespeare's plays began to be performed, the actors were thrown wholly upon their own resources, they were without any guide to the conception of his characters. Their predecessors before the commonwealth had the benefit of traditions which came, during an interval of little more than 18 years, directly down from Shakespeare himself, and which, but for that great political and social upturning of England would have remained unbroken to the present day. The new school of actors were obliged, in theatrical phrase, to "create" the Shakespearean characters now without the guidance of the dramatist, who in all cases it indeed hardly be said has a formative influence upon the first presentation of his personages to the public.

The Shetland Wrecks

Saturday Review

About as candidly such as that which has befallen the Shetland Isles there is after all very little to be said. When kings and princes fall victims to crime or accident the minutest details of what has happened are known and recorded. The sufferers are watched by observant eyes down to the very moment of disaster, and among the survivors are sure to be some who have taken note of every particular in the great man's bearing under the trial. It is not so when the victims are obscure fishermen, little skilled in the observation either of themselves or of other. We can faintly picture to ourselves the fine fishing weather of Wednesday week—weather which sent every available boat to sea, and promised to bring them back with heavy takes and full purses. The clouds that gathered as the night drew on to burst with a suddenness which left the crews with their boats now far out at sea and their nets and lines set, and the dread with which the wives and children of the fishermen watched the waves from daybreak on the Thursday, a dread which only went on increasing as the hours during which return was possible passed too quickly away. But beyond these generalities of misfortune there is nothing to be known. The lost boats will yield no survivors and the sea of Shetland are loth to give up their dead. Nowhere is the break up of family life so sudden and so unrelieved as in the wrecks of these northern waters. In a thousand different ways women may be widowed, children left orphans, and parents deprived of the sons who are their only support. But usually the dead are brought back and there is a little interval of silence and mourning, which serves to divide the life which the survivors have led hitherto from the life they must lead for the future. The families of these lost fishermen know no such pause. Their dead are doubly lost to them, since they are even denied the last looks and reverent burial. It is only their failure to return which others return that establishes the fact that they have died.

OUR WEST

Sneak thieves are increasing in Leadville

There is now a gambling the mineral baths at Idaho Springs

A strike of rich ore was made in the Joseph Mosker lode on Kelso mountain

The D & R G Ry Co have begun the final location of the Denver and Golden road

Surveying on the division of the Denver and Rio Grande from Pueblo to Pitkin is progressing rapidly

Maxwell, Brantley & Co's hardware store, in Las Vegas, was recently broken into by robbers, who took several articles

The Pride of the West lode on Silver creek, Georgetown, owned by Thos Lloyd and others, of Colorado Springs, is taking rank among the valuable mines of Colorado

The girls of Pueblo are getting wild A Chieftain reporter on Thursday was attracted by two young swells, with latest style of coats and hat who eventually proved to be two young ladies bent upon seeing the sights of the city

The streets of Denver are in such a condition from the rains that no one pretends to walk unless obliged to The horse cars are in consequence crowded The streets in the outskirts of the city are in as bad a condition as they were last March

The remains of Thos M Douglass who was killed by lightning near Ignacio on Sunday have been brought to Denver preparatory to being sent east He was about thirty five years of age and came to Colorado for his health The fatality occurred while on duty as a night herder He was a Free Mason, but it was not known to what order he belonged

The washouts and floods along the line of the Colorado Central and South Park roads on Wednesday proved very disastrous At Golden the road was damaged to such an extent that it took a large force of men all night to repair it The smelting works were also greatly damaged The cloud burst struck the Table mountain near Golden and washing down the gully past the smelting works, washed away huge piles of tailings and damaged the works to the extent of $12,000 or $15,000 The loss was not more than noticed to the Moore works

A Private School

Mrs Shropshire, who has had large experience as a teacher in New York city, and comes here with the highest recommendations as a teacher, proposes to open a private school this fall in this city The school is intended not only for young children but for those who will study French and other more advanced studies She also would like an advanced class in Spanish The terms will be forty dollars for a term of five months for advanced scholars and twenty five dollars a month for the younger children Mrs Shropshire can be found at the house of Dr Crocker, corner of Tejon and Kiowa streets, between the hours of 2 and 5 in the afternoon, when she will be glad to furnish further information

We have a good public school and preparatory college course, which are open to the youth of this city But this private school even under these circumstances, is desirable, and will be a valuable addition to our educational facilities It offers a course of study and peculiar advantages which our admirable schools cannot furnish We trust that this school will receive such patronage and encouragement as will make it strong and permanent

Base Ball To-day

Several weeks ago there was a game of ball between the freight and voucher departments of the auditor's office which resulted in the defeat of the latter by a score of six to eight This afternoon a return game will be played between these two nines on the Weber street grounds, which promises to be an interesting one The following are the names of the men comprising the two nines

Voucher—Messrs Kent, Donnelly, Thornell, Marsh, Richmond, McIntyre, Kroning, Delahay and Pitts

Freight Messrs Kessler, Rockwell, Curtis, Phelan, Stowell, Newman, Donaldson, Ford and Hackett.

The Denver & Rio Grande club have been to somewhat of an expense in fitting up the Weber street grounds, and in order to defray their expenses an admittance fee of ten cents will be charged In all probability the game will be as strong a one as was ever played in Colorado Springs, both nines being composed of the best base ball material in the city
